Act II, Scene 2 (AHK) — Eight years later

Seriously. How is this a big deal? You had a couple of beers, that's all. If your family had money, this would be over already. Your friend Rebecca got caught last month, but it just got handled. This isn't really a big deal.

But you can't lose your license! Your job is the only freedom you have. As long as you are making your own money you get to decide what to do with it. If you didn't have money of your own, you couldn't go out with your friends, and you'd be stuck wearing clothing your mom likes. Plus there are some days you think your job is the only reason your mom lets you out of the house.

Your uncle William is a big lawyer. He's helped your family out with money issues in the past. Surely he'll help you out of this as well.
