

Charles Gardener

Act II, Scene 2 (BGL) — Eight years later

Poor Stephanie. You know exactly what she's going through. You certainly got in trouble enough as a teenager. Adolescence is hard, especially without a father figure in your life. While William has always provided for Barbara and Stephanie, he hasn't really spent a lot of time with his daughter. Even though William has been so absent, Barbara has never let you help out with Stephanie the way you would have liked.

After William's neglect led to this, the least he can do is help his daughter out of her legal trouble. He's a well-connected lawyer, and he's certainly helped you out of jams before. It's his abandonment that led her to this anyway.

Maybe you can offer to help out more in the future. Maybe you really need to spend more time with Stephanie, regardless of what Barbara thinks. If William won't be a father to his own daughter maybe you can help out. You've been there; you know a lot of what she's going through. You should take her aside today and really talk with her about what's going on in her life.
